just one out of hundreds that are coming in every day. We publish it for the benefit of the women who read about Pearline, but who still keep on washing without it, in that needlessly hard and wearing way. We omit name and address, as requested:

"Now I will tell you how I came to use your PEARLINE. We have taken the 'Ladies' Home Journal' for several years. There's a half year ago, every time I picked up my 'Journal' to read, the first thing I would see was your advertisement and picture of PEARLINE. I get so tired of looking at it, that I said I would get a package and try it. The result was, when the package was gone I bought another package, and I have done ever since. I never think of going to wash clothes since, except my PEARLINE. I have recommended it to quite a number of people, who are now using it, just from my recommendation. I have just written this to you to let you know how highly I prize it. I don't want my name and address to go before the public."

ALL BUT ONE DROWNED.

Terrible Experience of a Shipwrecked Crew.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 27. Wood has reached here from Marquette of the loss of the schooner William Hume, off Pointe Seulchoir, Lake Michigan, about Tuesday night. Six of the crew were drowned. The home left Marquette Saturday evening, carrying tons of pig iron in tow of steamer Buell. The Alvin and Fulton were also being towed. When off Pointe Seulchoir the vessel shifted and struck on the old timber bridge, sprang a leak, and the seams and water began to pour into the hold. The crew signaled the Buell and their porters, but could get no response.

The iron line was cut and set astern in the hope of making shore before the vessel sank. Half an hour after the shifting of the cargo, however, the crew were compelled to abandon the yawl. There was a heavy sea running, and the little boat soon capsized. All seven of the crew managed to reach the overturned boat, but one by one they were swamped. The last survivor, excepting Anton Minge of Detroit, was rescued. Minge is on the yawl's keel and was finally blown up on the beach near the light-house, where he was found in an unconscious condition yesterday afternoon.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

The Minneapolis &amp; St. Louis Railroad to be Reorganized.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 27. One of the attorneys for the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway stockholders received a private telegram last night that the road had been sold to the Chicago & North Western for $1,000,000. The sale was to take effect on Oct. 1, and both the Illinois Central and the Rock Island have been laying wires to secure the property. F. W. Dill, president of the stockholders' committee, has arranged with those holding the majority of the equipment and improvement bonds to take them up. All of the $4,500,000 have been raised in gold coin. This ends the entanglement of the road which began with the appointment of a receiver in '88.

Amazing Ingratitude of the Southern Democracy.

Thousands of heretofore steadfast Democrats in Maine, who have found the yoke this year too heavy to bear, will appreciate the protest uttered by the New York Sic, under the above heading. There has been no more candid or emphatic arraignment of the intolerance of the Southern Democracy since Blon Bradbury thirty years ago uttered his famous that "the hills and valleys of New England are whitened with the bones of Democrats who have been sacrificed to the arrogant and unscrupulous demands of the South." The same trial of only one phase of the Southern Democracy's assault upon the Northaving nothing about it the most deplorable of our industry by breaking down our protective tariff, or the courageous acts of the great veterans in connection with their position here, but its arraignment of the Southern Democracy for a direct attack upon Northern energy and thrift for the enactment of an income tax, is strong and scathing. After telling the Southern Democrats how much they owe the thick-skin support of their latest assault in the North, the Sic adds:

In return, as regards the South, has imposed on the Democratic party of the North the yoke of an income tax, a tax which comes from one of the foundations of the Democratic platform with a formal recognition of the same, and has taxed us to the bone.

The Southern Democrats impugned the Democratic application of a principle of a repulsive to Democrats and destructive to the South, and from the Northern doughface Democrats and also from the Populists, from whom alone the original demand for the income tax came, we should have been spared the same. But there was more pecuniary害 than mere expense outside of the ranks of the political freedom of Republianism, and it would be wrong for the Democratic party to let itself be used as a means of obtaining the principles of that party. But the Southern Democrats insisted on making the other party pay the piper, and the threats of the Courts there have been, were perhaps the chief factor which those guilty of it had in the staff of others. The advocacy of the income tax by the South is an expression of hostility to the rights of capital, and to the right to live and work, to the outside interests, and the outside enterprise, so much needed, especially in a region in which the government says that it is a region where the people are subject to special restraints and penalties in taxation. Politically, too, the course of the Southern Democrats promises to be fatal to them. They have disclosed to the Federal Government the secret of the load which endangers the future of the South, though upon its prosperity their own political hopes depend.

It is true, that David B. Hill is nominated as the Democratic candidate for Governor in New York, it is worth while to remember that he openly deplored the income tax as a Southern Democrat, and still adheres to it, in seeking the future of the South, though upon its prosperity their own political hopes depend.

But those who may appear, looking into this last edition and finding the exact feature of an income tax—a bill of war, legislation—penal and reflect upon the possible consequences of the same, they should recollect that this income-tax feature is pretty regardless in New York, and many other Northern States, as a scheme of operation, an anti-slavery and social attack upon the whole of means.

More recently still we have had a congressional speech, H. N. O'Neil, of Boston, testifying in a published letter to his constituents of the character of the measure, as follows:

In relation to the income tax, I voted against putting it in the tariff bill, but every Democrat from New York and New England did, with a single exception. The vote was, however, in the majority, through the only question which entered into the vote was whether or not, it should be put into the tariff bill.

"How About Sugar?"

At the Democratic State Convention in Connecticut this week, the temporary chairman, Mr. Gano, asked whether anyone had gone to the store and found prices had risen, as he said was the case after the passage of the McKinley bill. He was interrupted by the cry "How about sugar?" and his answer was that anything un-Democratic in the new tariff bill was due to an "unholy alliance between the Republicans and a few unscrupulous Democratic Senators." That sort of flip-flop was too silly even for the Boston Herald to swallow at this stage of the campaign, and it editorially pictures the very thin bubble of Mr. Gano, by reducing him of certain notorious facts. For fear that the Herald might suffer from lapses of memory later in the campaign, when cottons grow very hot for the Democratic party, we will postpone its stupid statements in our column for reference. It says:

Democrat after Democrat threw the whole blame for the present sugar schedule upon the "unholy alliance" between the Republicans and the German Democratic Party, and when he wrote the letter to Senator Harris, objecting to the repeal of the sugar duties, all that letter was published the Democratic and very fair defense on the sugar question.

The public demand for free sugar was so strong, and the popular distaste of the sugar trust so intense, that when the free sugar bill came up in the Senate there was a fighting chance of its passage through that body by a holy alliance between the Republicans and a contingent of western Republicans. The Herald, seeing this chance, and realizing well what a heavy burden the sugar tax would lay upon the people, was in a position to aid the tariff reformers of the Senate with the fighting spirit which the occasion called for.

At this critical moment Senator Carlisle interposed for the maintenance of the sugar duties. His intervention turned the scale against the people. He claimed that the repeal of the sugar duties would cost a deficit of $100,000,000 during the present session of Congress.

The fact is, the revenue estimate furnished by the Treasury Department to the Senate Finance Committee, and the committee report, which it was held evidently took into account, did not hold up the pretension that the sugar duties were indispensable.

Even if Mr. Carlisle's figures were correct, the position of the sugar trust in the face of the revenue estimates furnished by the Treasury Department to the Senate Finance Committee, and the committee report, which it was held evidently took into account, did not hold up the pretension that the sugar duties were indispensable.

The "Herald's" figures were therefore not correct, and the whole of the sugar bill came up in the Senate there was a fighting chance of its passage through that body by a holy alliance between the Republicans and a contingent of western Republicans. The Herald, seeing this chance, and realizing well what a heavy burden the sugar tax would lay upon the people, was in a position to aid the tariff reformers of the Senate with the fighting spirit which the occasion called for.

The "Herald's" figures were the shoulders of the German clique and the Republicans.

It will do no harm to make a note of these explicit admissions, but it will be noticed that the Herald is not candid enough to state that the Republicans had no part in any alliance to put a tax upon sugar, as they voted consistently to continue the policy of free sugar, imagined in the McKinley law.

A paper published in the Province of Quebec in extolling over the advantages given to the producers of the Dominion by the sensible tariff legislation of the Democrats in the U. S. Congress, says:

When times become good again with our neighbors there is sure to be an increased demand for Canadian lumber at better prices. The Canadian farmer likewise will have the opportunity of improving the standard of living which is taken in the duties on live stock and farm produce.

Horses, sheep, hogs and barley are some of the chief products which their neighbors buy at a lower price and which were hard hit by the McKinley duties. Mr. Charlton, M. P., a reliable authority, estimates that Canadians have been deprived of $10,000,000 per annum by the imposition of the duties on live stock and farm produce.

Horses, sheep, hogs and barley are some of the chief products which their neighbors buy at a lower price and which were hard hit by the McKinley duties. The net tariff, except in the case of lumber, has not raised the price of any of the chief articles of consumption of our farmers. The Canadian farmer likewise will have the opportunity of improving the standard of living which is taken in the duties on live stock and farm produce.
